Success Can Be Obtained In Transplanting of Evergreens

G. D. Matthews, Superintendent, Dominion Experimental Station, Scott, Saskatchewan, Says Directions Must Be Followed Explicitly

G. D. Matthews, Superintendent, Dominion Experimental Station, Scott, Sask., has the following to say on transplanting young evergreens: Success in transplanting evergreens is only obtained by following directions exactly. Experience in this work revealed that their roots are very susceptible to damage from exposure to air, clay subsoil and contact with manure.

From the time a young spruce tree is lifted until transplanted the roots must not be allowed to become dry. If the roots are not covered with soil they must be kept immersed in water or wrapped in moist material during the short interval.

The new hole should provide plenty of room for the roots. Some surface soil should be placed in the bottom of the hole before transplanting to avoid contact with the cold clay. No manure or fertilizer should be used with evergreens at the time of transplanting.

The young tree should be placed in the hole quickly, and roots covered with surface soil immediately. If the soil is dry a little water should be added, but must not be made too wet. Soil must be around the roots and continued until the hole is filled. It must be remembered that the tree should be in the position required before firming soil, to avoid changing its position after the hole is filled.

Moved by Mr. Archibald that council adjourn. Crd.
CHAS. WILBRAHAM,
Secretary-Treasurer, Municipal District Battle River, No. 423, Irma, Alberta.

A surface application of water can be added after transplanting is completed. The tree should be planted a little deeper than it originally was, and no pruning or cutting back of the young tree should be done.

Spruce can be readily transplanted in the fall after freeze-up, when large trees can be used more conveniently with a frozen ball of earth around their roots.

Satisfactory results in transplanting evergreens at the Dominion Experimental Station at Scott, Sask., have been obtained by following the above procedure. Young evergreens transplanted twenty years ago are now outstanding in their size and beauty. Young trees transplanted in recent years indicate the same success will be obtained.

A Momentous World Event

A momentous conference is, at the time this article is written, taking place in Washington between Premier Ramsay MacDonald of Great Britain and President Roosevelt of the United States. That conference is to be followed by others between the President and the heads of other nations. All are preliminary to the World Economic Conference to be held in London in June, and the object of these many preliminary conferences is to find common ground of agreement so as to assure the success of the world gathering to follow.

As Ramsay MacDonald said upon his arrival at New York, President Roosevelt and himself, who, he believed, were in harmony of spirit regarding all great world causes, were getting together to explore the problems that have to be dealt with and endeavour to find formulas for their solution. That is, Ramsay MacDonald, a life-long advocate of peace between nations in the sense that there should not be physical warfare, is now striving with might and main to bring about peace between the nations in an economic sense, and to endeavour to overcome to the fullest extent possible, the economic damage done to the world as the result of the last Great War. In President Roosevelt he finds a man of the same spirit imbued with determination.

At the time of writing, newspaper despatches from Washington indicate that, although the conferences between these two great leaders of the English-speaking world are not finally concluded, it is the universal belief that eventually satisfactory agreements have been reached on all the major problems, and common ground of action decided upon when the World Economic Conference assembles. Furthermore, that Great Britain and the United States will not unitedly endeavour to secure the acceptance of these views by other nations.

It is stated that these world leaders believe they have found formulas for the solution of existing world problems and the ending of the depression which has affected the world for the past three or four years. These solutions it is frankly recognized cannot be brought about by any one nation, or even by two or three nations, because the problems are international and world-wide in extent and in their application. It is further recognized that betterment of existing conditions cannot be achieved by solving one or two of universally recognized problems; rather that action must be taken in regard to a whole series of matters all more or less correlated to each other, with one interlocking into another.

This is not to say that Premier and President have decided that the whole existing economic system of the world must be replaced by some entirely new system. It does mean that they recognize the fact that, while monetary systems, international finance, systems of exchange, war debts and reparations, tariffs, trade quotas and embargoes; production and distribution of commodities of all kinds; world armaments, etc., all have a bearing and effect on the one great problem, the basic cause of the world's troubles, and therefore the ultimate solution, is not to be found in any one of these things, but to a greater or lesser extent in all of them.

They are not approaching world problems as theorists, but as practical men of affairs, leaders of their people, world leaders of experience, determined, as Ramsay MacDonald says, "to clear the obstacles which block the highways of trade, both within our own countries and between the nations, and so restore the hope of employment to the workless millions who look to earn their living in factory and field."

Therefore, to the extent that existing monetary systems and international methods of finance and exchange present obstacles along the high ways of trade they must be altered; not destroyed, but improved so as to facilitate greater freedom of exchange and render a maximum of service to the world. So, too, in regard to tariffs, quotas, embargoes, trade restrictions of all kinds. They are not seeking to bring about world free trade, which is presently impossible, but to encourage and promote, rather than discourage and restrict, trade between nations without doing damage to the interests of any; in a word, to develop mutually advantageous reciprocal exchange of commodities. Likewise, to deal with war debts, reparations, armaments in the same spirit and in order to achieve a like result. War debts cannot all be cancelled, reparations abandoned in toto, complete disarmament effected, but the obstacles erected by these things across the trade highways of the world can be largely removed.

Bringing the leading statesmen and heads of nations together in this spirit, and with such an object in view, is, we repeat, a momentous event in the world's history. International conferences, world conferences, for the exchange of national views and the exposition of national needs for friendly examination and discussion of opposing viewpoints, policies and interests, and approaching problems which are the concern of all in a conciliatory spirit, is the sane, sensible, businesslike and Christian attitude. It is constructive, not destructive. It is practical, not impossibly Utopian. It offers hope of success, because it is not narrowly selfish but accords consideration and fair play to all.

Aiding Salvation Army

Dutch Indies Have Issued Stamps To Help Work

The new charity stamps of the Dutch Indies have attracted a great deal of interest, for they are the first stamps ever issued in aid of the Salvation Army. In Java and other remote parts of the Dutch Indies, the Salvation Army is largely responsible for the care and education of the native children, the management of hospitals and work among the lepers. That is the reason why this great institution is represented on these stamps.

The Dutch name for Salvation Army is "Leger des Heils." This appears on each stamp and also the Salvation Army crest in the two lower corners. The set consists of four stamps, and each stamp depicts the various handicraft that are taught the natives. The central subject of each design is in brown, and the remainder of the design in the following colors: Two-cent, violet; five-cent, sage-green; twelve and a half cents, rose, fifteen-cent, blue.

Quite Out Of Date

Modern War Moving From Chivalry To Chemicals

An article by E. M. Forster, in the Spectator, London, says: The sword, the bayonet, the rifle, the cannon are all anachronisms and will soon only survive in a military tattoo. The destruction they caused was local and so the sentiments connected with them are out of date. In the war of the future destruction will be universal. Bacterial bombs as well as poison gas will fall from the sky, the distinction between combatants and non-combatants will disappear, women and children will be as suitable a target as men, and it is not this or that king and country which will go down in the general catastrophe, but all kings and all countries. War has moved from chivalry to chemicals, and unless we can get this into our heads we are doomed, kings included.

Translated Just For One

How the history of Italian unity was translated and published in Braille just because a blind girl at Oxford University wanted to read it was told recently by the Archbishop of Canterbury, in London. Twenty-one volumes of Braille, he said, were made especially for her in nine months by two voluntary subscribers to the society.

Cannot Eliminate All Advertising Over Radio

Canadian System Must Compromise Opinion Of British Official Gladstone Murray, public relations officer of the British Broadcasting Corporation, made a spirited attack on opponents of public service broadcasting. Mr. Murray, who is spending several weeks in Canada as adviser to the Federal Broadcasting Commission, spoke to the Toronto Empire Club.

While not suggesting United States radio programs at their best were inferior to those of Great Britain, the speaker insisted that program building under the sponsored advertising principle was increasingly more difficult than under the license system employed in the United Kingdom.

He dealt particularly with the finance of broadcasting, contending that, far from being a charge on public funds, it was, in fact, a potential source of substantial profit.

"I have too much knowledge of my own country, Canada," he continued, "to suggest that it should adopt a copy of the British or any other broadcasting service. Conditions here are so different that the B.B.C. could not be copied, even if that were desirable."

"A vast area, a comparatively small and scattered population—these are not the conditions which, in these hard times, admit the elimination of advertising from broadcasting. It seems to me that while the ideal everywhere should be the reduction of advertising to a minimum, there is at present the necessity for compromise and this I understand it, is the policy of the Commission."

Designed Speed Engines

Sir Henry Royce Of Auto Fame Dies In England

Sir Henry Royce, 70, of West Witley, England, whose brain was behind some of the world's fastest automobile and aeroplane engines, is dead after being bedridden for six months. He was a joint founder with C. S. Rolls of Rolls-Royce, Ltd., motor car and aeroplane engine builders, of Derby and London, in 1907.

He founded Royce, Ltd., mechanical and electrical engineers of Manchester, in 1884. When Rolls-Royce, Ltd., was formed he became its director and chief engineer.

He designed the engines which gained for Great Britain speed records on land, sea and air. It was with his engines that Flight-Lieut. G. H. Stainforth established the world air record, Sir Malcolm Campbell shattered his own land record and Kaye Don secured the speedboat record.

Position Is Unique

Britain Undertakes Duty Without Dominion In Persian Gulf

The position of Great Britain in the Persian Gulf is unique in world politics. Without owning a square mile of territory on either of its shores, or even possessing one of its barren and inhospitable islands as a base, she has, for generations borne burdens there which no other nations has ever shouldered, except in the capacity of Sovereign; she has undertaken duty without dominion; she has kept and keeps the peace among people who never have been and are not her subjects; she has policed waters over which she has no formal authority, and she has kept an open market in those distant ports equally to all the merchants of the world.

Oath Of Atheist Legal

Whether an atheist's oath is worth anything on a court witness stand was the question placed before Judge Ernest A. Inglis in superior court at Hartford, Conn. James Guy, an artist, admitted he was an atheist, and counsel moved to throw out his testimony. Judge Inglis ruled that even an atheist can swear to tell the truth and allowed Guy's testimony to stand.

No More Thrills In Life For Sir Basil Zaharoff

Visitors from Monte Carlo tell about an old man who is, assisted each day into a palatial automobile, taken on a brief drive in the nearby districts, and then brought back to his hotel. This is just a bit of routine, but it composes a perfect setting for the withered, tired face of the man within the limousine.

For the face is that of Sir Basil Zaharoff, for more than a generation romanticized throughout the world for his mysterious financial ramifications, and his amazing genius to sell armaments—to sell them on a big scale, to equip entire countries for war.

He became a multi-millionaire. He always was an amazing figure, one of those European anomalies created out of the blood of many nations, with intrigue in his veins, aristocratic charm in his features, and at least ten languages on his tongue.

But today, Sir Basil is just a tired, old man. Playing with the fates of nations, of entire populations, no longer has any fascination for him. That has become dull. His fortune estimated at about $175,000,000 no longer buys him any thrills. He looks out from his car upon the lowly peasants, singing in the field, and no one knows what thoughts pass within his brain.

The greater part of Monte Carlo belongs to him. But he doesn't visit the gambling casino, and disclaims any interest in it.

He was born 84 years ago at Odessa, South Russia, of Greek parents. He grew up to know ten languages when still a lad, and thus entered an armaments firm as an interpreter.

Germany Training Troops

Out Of 770,000 Men 282,000 Are Ready For Immediate Action

Germany has at its disposal today 770,000 men trained for war, according to an estimate in the Czechoslovak newspaper Libove Noviny. Its figures follow:

The Reichswehr	100,000
The Navy	15,000
Regular Police	120,000
Auxiliary Police	45,000
Nazi Troopers	430,000
Stahlhelm	60,000

Total 770,000
Of these the newspaper asserts 282,000 are ready for immediate action and the others are being trained under high pressure. Special attention, it is declared, is being paid in Germany to military aviation and successful attempts are being made to adapt commercial planes to military purposes.

Mansion Turned Into Flats

Former Home Of English Duke Cost Over Two Million

Costly dual mansion, once the home of the Duke and Duchess of Marlborough, is to be turned into residential flats. Known as Sunderland House, Mayfair, it was built in 1895 at a cost of $2,500,000 by W. K. Vanderbilt, American millionaire, when his daughter Consuelo married the Duke of Marlborough. The famous ballroom, eighty-nine feet by twenty, and twenty-seven feet high, is claimed to be the finest in Mayfair. It cost a $250,000 and has marble pilasters, a painted ceiling, and a musicians' gallery. It is recorded that 350 couples have danced there. The thirty-two bedrooms are to be divided into flats, ranging from single rooms for bachelors to suites of four or five rooms.

Royal Scot Arrives

Coaches shining brightly under a protective covering of wax, the Royal Scot, Britain's fastest express train, arrived at Montreal aboard the freighter "Beaverdale." At the docks, a giant crane swung the cars from the ship's deck to the rails alongside the wharf. The engine was in two parts and had to be assembled.

Legend About Aviatix

Javanese Paper Tells Why Amy Johnson Commenced To Fly

When Amy Johnson made her forced landing in the Dutch East Indies on her flight to Australia, details of her adventures were published by a missionary priest in a newspaper in Java and they received wide currency among the islanders. An early form of the Amy Johnson legend has been published by the Rev. Father Lattey, a Jesuit priest, in the Times. Father Lattey derived his information from a Javan visitor to Heythrop College, Oxfordshire.

Translated into modern English, the Amy Johnson legend in its present form runs somewhat as follows: "In a far-away kingdom lived a husband and his wife. They were immensely rich and they had one daughter. They made her study under wise men so that she became very learned, but when she came home she did not understand household affairs, and she was scolded by her mother accordingly."

"Finally the daughter became angry herself and ran away and went to a skilful plumber, and the two together made a machine with fire inside to fly in the air. In this she climbed above her village and landed there to the great astonishment of the people. "Her parents, though still angry, were proud of her, and her father promised forgiveness if she could fly across the sea and come back safely. So she had to fly across the sea, and came to this island, which time the fire inside the machine had gone out and she had to put in a new fire. "Now she has still to cross one more sea, but if she succeeds and comes home again her father will give her much money and build her a house with a roof of corrugated iron."

Answers Old Question

Pressure Of Expanding Steam Causes Popcorn To Pop

Why does popcorn pop? Perhaps every child has asked that question at some time or other. Sometimes parents are unable to answer the question. The United States Department of Agriculture is authority for the statement that popcorn pops because the moisture stored in the kernels of popcorn is converted into expanding steam when the popcorn is heated. The internal pressure of the expanding steam within the kernels causes the violent explosions which we commonly call popping.

Noon Concerts For Workers

Zlin, Czechoslovakia, famous for its large shoe factory, is enjoying concerts for workers at noon. The factory serves a midday meal for about eight cents. This consists of a main dish, possibly veal, served with potatoes and salad, and a slice of cake. After the meal comes the concert. "There's one lucky devil in this world, Baker. The man that Miss MacMillan's going to marry."

Alan winced. He had never thought of Joyce marrying another man. The remark aroused a passionate unreasoning hurt in him.

Sitting at the edge of the bed, Buzard smoked a cigarette and glanced nervously at his partner who had lain down and was trying to get a little rest to fit himself for the flight and battle just ahead. Something was wrong between Alan and this winsome, spirited Joyce MacMillan.

There was, or had been, some passionate relationship between them. It had evidently gone on the rocks. Baker was engaged to some girl at Fort Endurance; and Miss MacMillan . . . Well, there was that incident which he himself had seen half an hour ago when he happened to glance through the window.

"It's a pity," he thought, "for them to bust up. A d-d shame, that's what. She's a regular girl. Looks, personality and spunk. . . . Lord, I'd hate to ever quarrel with her!"

He wondered whether to tell Alan about that incident he'd seen. Alan was evidently floundering around in the dark about, Miss MacMillan. He was a bit awkward and blundered in such matters. Buzard thought:

"First chance I get, believe I'll tell him what she did. He ought to know. She either loves him or hates him, to do a thing like that!"

When Alan woke up late in the evening, Buzard was still asleep and Bill Haddock was dead to the world. Hoping to find Joyce, he went out into the trading hall.

Joyce was not there. For a few moments Alan stood looking about. As Bill had told him, she was closing out the post. He hated to think of Joyce's girlhood home being sold to some utter stranger. Thinking of Larry, soon to be invalided out of service, and condemned to a life of intolerable idleness, he wondered whether he might not get this post for his crippled patrol partner. It was well located, and Larry's host of friends among the Indians would be sure to bring him their furs.

Still hunting Joyce, he went down to the landing where old Pence, whittling at his story-stick, was guarding the "plans" against any log floating down and damaging it.

"You rise up early, Alan, y'?"

"Yes. Got a couple things to do. They must've been on my mind. Where's Joyce?"

"She went down th' river bank, down th' that 'st buck comin' out'n th' timber; to snag some trout. We're shy on meat."

Alan stepped into Dave MacMillan's canoe, laid in an extra paddle, and started down stream. Gliding around the first bend, he saw Joyce two hundred yards ahead, standing on a jutting rock beside a brook mouth. When he came alongside and lifted the canoe prow out upon the shelving rock, she greeted him with a quiet friendly smile. They sat down together on the wolf-foot moss.

After his days in the plane, with the swish of hurtling struts and the thunder of a motor dining his ears, it was incredibly quiet on the spruce-buried stream.

Very observant, he covertly stared at Joyce. She was looking past him at the far shore and woods. As he studied her features, it seemed to Alan that something profound had happened to her since he saw her last.

She had changed; she was hardly the same girl. There was some new strange spiritual quality about her, as of a person who has gone down into a ravaging sickness and has had the strength to conquer and rise out of it, but at a terrible cost.

To break the silence between them he began telling her of these last weeks—his trip to Edmonton, his providential luck in meeting Buzard, the prison charges that stood against them, their flight back north, their escape from Haskell's trap, his gladness when he saw her running down the path.

As she listened, thoroughly alive to the danger and hardships he had gone through, Joyce felt a profound gratitude, for she knew Alan had done this largely for her sake. When he mentioned the prison charges facing him, she experienced a moment of panic; and imagined herself testifying in his behalf, fighting for him as he had fought for her.

A little later, after they had discussed plans for closing in upon the bandits, Alan rose up and gave her his hand to rise. He said:

"I've got to go down river a few miles, Joyce. Bill cashed some supplies near that saut where you and I got upset that day and had to swim for it. I want to bring them up here this evening."

He waited a moment for some hint that she might wish to go along with him. None came. He suggested:

"I'd take only a couple hours. If you'd care to, I'd like for you to go."

"I'd better stay. Bill and Mr. Featherfoot will be awake before long. I'll have supper ready when you get back."

"It can help you with that—if you'll go."

Joyce hesitated. She was aware that Alan deeply wanted her company. After all he'd done for her, it seemed cruelly ungrateful to refuse. And she herself wanted to go. But bitter wisdom whispered a warning.

Since that morning when she turned his letters and picture and gifts to ashes, there had been no looking back. There must be none now. She had strength and courage to talk with him calmly and to act toward him as though they had never been more than good friends; but she dared not presume too far on that new-born strength. To be alone with him two hours on a twilight river, with their talk inevitably drifting to former times—it would be unbearable.

With gentle firmness she said: "I'd like to go Alan. But I'll have to run back to the post. There's so many things to do." She tried to smile. "I don't want to be a neglectful hostess to Bill and Mr. Featherfoot."

As she started up the river trail, her thoughts brooded on several things Alan had said in the course of his service, especially on his occasional references to Elizabeth. Not that he had said anything derogatory about

DOES OWN HOUSE- WORK AT 70

With the Help of Kruschen

"For nine years now I have used Kruschen Salts and could not do without them. I take a third of a teaspoon in a cup of water as hot as I can drink it. No sickness, no headaches now. I am 70 years of age in April, and just with taking Kruschen Salts am able to do all my housework duties myself. I recommend Kruschen to all my neighbours. Before I began taking it I was never away from the doctor, but now I never need him. I used to have sick headaches and then was not able to do anything. But now it is different—thanks to Kruschen Salts."—(Mrs.) J.G.

Kruschen keeps the organs of the body working actively, cleanses all clogging impurities from the system, and sends clear, vigorous blood coursing through the veins. And the result? An end to all life's minor ills and miseries. No more headaches, tiredness, depression, "nerves," or constipation! Instead, a sensation of delightful freshness, high spirits, happy outlook—in short, sheer good health!

Elizabeth. But his tone, his manner disillusioned. Was he becoming a little belligerent? Was he seeing Elizabeth Spaulding not as the sister of his dead partner Curt, not as a girl to be cherished and shielded, but as a selfish, calculating person? Was he dimly foreseeing what his married life with her was going to be?

Joyce checked herself sharply from hoping or even thinking that Alan might break off his engagement, or from extending him anything more than grateful friendship. She was glad, profoundly glad, that his words had caused no resurrection of hope, no tremor of emotion. The discovery of her strength suffused her with a kind of pride. But for all that, she felt a great sorrow for Alan. He was bitterly unhappy, and she knew it. What was his situation now? Police work, his life in the North, comradeship with his old friends—everything that he had cherished was stripped away from him, and he was going into a marriage reluctantly and forcing himself into a life that was alien to his whole nature. When Joyce thought of all that, her sympathy, tender and compassionate, went out to him wholeheartedly.

Returning at deep twilight with the drums, Alan found Buzard cleaning rouled spark plugs on the "plane engine."

Candles were already lit in the trading store. Alan looked up the path, expecting to see Joyce's figure in the lighted doorway. He hoped to have an hour to two alone with her this evening. But all day the conviction had grown upon him that a talk would be worse than useless. If only God's truth didn't sound so preposterous; if he could tell Joyce that he had become engaged to Elizabeth, had expected to marry Elizabeth, and yet all the time, in his deepest longing, had wanted not Elizabeth but her. . . .

"If we're going to get away from here first thing in the morning," Buzard broke into his thoughts, "we ought to put in a couple hours' work after supper on these alluron leads. They're pretty bad frayed around the pulleys."

At the end, by his work alone Can the soul of a man be laid bare; And his hope cannot be overthrown For his labor will conquer his care.

He would weary of Eden now And of dull hours' idle round. For so long by the sweat of his brow Has he mastered the stubborn ground.

And his toiling has brought him strength With a vestige of Godlike power. He is builder and maker, at length, And he shares in creation's dowry!

It is good to have work at your hand, And to know the feel of the tool, Good to build and to understand That all life still must go by this rule.

Be your instrument sword or pen, There are channels for each one's need, And through engine or lathe some men Can speak so the world must heed.

At the end, by his work alone Can the soul of a man be laid bare; And his hope cannot be overthrown For his labor will conquer his care.

He would weary of Eden now And of dull hours' idle round. For so long by the sweat of his brow Has he mastered the stubborn ground.

And his toiling has brought him strength With a vestige of Godlike power. He is builder and maker, at length, And he shares in creation's dowry!

"What!" Alan whirled on him, gasping. "Burn Up That Centure Fleches?"

Alan knew that Buzard was asking him to help with that job. But he did not answer. He wanted this evening with Joyce. Unless he took circumstances into his own hands tonight, he and Joyce would drift across a continent from each other in a few days more. Torn with uncertainty of her affections for him, he was debating about this evening. After the incidents of today—his picture gone, her coldness, her refusal to go with him—he was wavering, undecided.

He tossed his cigarette out on the water. "Maybe we'd better go up and help Joyce what we can."

Buzard did not stir. For several minutes he had been glancing uneasily at Alan. Finally he screwed up courage to speak.

"It's strictly none of my business, Alan, but—but. . . . You're engaged to a girl there at Endurance, but you bought Miss MacMillan that rainbow scarf with your last dollar, and you talked a lot about getting back here and helping her—"

Alan was loath to speak of Joyce, even with a partner. He tried to say quietly: "We've been good friends for several years. She's one of the sweetest girls I ever knew. You've met her now. You'd naturally want to help her, wouldn't you?"

"Of course. But—but. . . . See here, I may be imagining things; you can tell me to shut up if you want to—but it seems to me there's something wrong between you and her."

Alan repeated, rather shortly: "We're good friends. There's nothing more than that."

Buzard knew different. He had had a vague suspicion of it ever since Alan first mentioned Joyce MacMillan's name at the cafe in Edmonton. As he remembered the incident of this noon, he wondered at the Spartan courage Joyce had shown and at the passion behind such an act. Surely some bitter unhappiness lay between her and Baker.

He said reluctantly: "If that's true, if you're merely friends and nothing more, what made her burn up that scarf you brought her?"

"What?" Alan whirled on him, gasping. "Burn up that centure fleche?" He half-rose. "You say that's what she did? You're sure about that? You didn't make a mistake?"

Honor Memory Of Asquith

Memorial Tablet Has Been Placed In Westminster Abbey

Following an address to the King from the House of Commons a tablet to the memory of the late Lord Oxford and Asquith, three times Prime Minister, was placed in the "Collegiate Church of Saint Peter, Westminster."

This manner of describing Westminster Abbey gives the Abbey its ceremonial title and serves to remind those who have forgotten that Westminster Abbey is primarily a place of worship, and only by accident a place of assembly for memorials to Britain's illustrious dead.

The last, memorial to a great statesman placed in the Abbey was that erected to Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, who preceded Lord Oxford and Asquith as Premier, in 1910. W. E. Gladstone, who died in 1898, was the last Prime Minister actually interred within the Abbey. The ashes of the late Andrew Bonar Law, native of New Brunswick, and Prime Minister for a short time immediately after the war who died in 1923, were laid under the nave.

The Abbey authorities nowadays grant burial in only the most exceptional conditions, and then only if cremation precedes interment.

Little Helps For This Week

"Walk worthy of the Lord unto all pleasing, being fruitful in every good work, and increasing in the knowledge of God, strengthened with all might, according to His glorious power unto all patience and long-suffering with joyfulness."—Colossians 1: 10, 11.

To be the thing we seem,
To be the thing we deem
Enjoined by duty;
To walk in faith, nor dream
Of questioning God's Scheme
Of truth and beauty—Anon.

This day thou knowest ten commanded duties, seen in thy mind ten things which should be done for one that thou doest. Do one of them, of itself will show thee others which can and shall be done.—Thomas Carlyle.

He who lives for himself is but one small parcel of his real self. He who lives for others feels himself expand. If you live for yourself you will be surrounded by enemies. You will feel that each one's happiness limits your own. Live for others and you will feel surrounded by friends, and the good of each one will become your good.—Tolstoi.

High Price For Stamp

A "penny red" Mauritius stamp was sold in London recently for $12,000, at par exchange, the highest price ever paid for a stamp in England. Its face value was two cents. A Mauritius two-penny blue stamp brought $8,500. The stamps were in the collection of the late H. P. Manus, of Amsterdam.

No Need For Loss

There was no need for the loss of the Akron. An expert testified that the officers knew of the storm before leaving the ground and that if the ship had risen to 10,000 or 12,000 feet or come down to 100, the ship would have escaped. This was recognized practice.

Keeps Up Old Custom

Members Leaving British House At Night Hear Ancient Cry

Each night the House of Commons ends its sitting with a cry which, no doubt, is centuries old. The Speaker notifies that the House is adjourned and leaves the chair, the mace is removed from the table, the great doors to the lobby are flung wide open and the stentorian voice of the doorkeeper calls, "Who goes home?" In the years gone by many perils fro footpads and bravos lurked in the London streets. Link-bots lighted a way with their torches. Members departing would set out in little groups for mutual protection. The doorkeeper's cry called them together.—London Daily Telegraph.

For Baby's Bath

More than that of any other member of the family, baby's tender, delicate skin needs the greatest care and attention. The soft soothing oils in Baby's Own Soap make it specially suitable for babies, and its clinging fragrance reminds one of the roses of France which help to inspire it.

"It's best for you and Baby too"

You'll be delighted with it. It dries as it cleans, as it polishes.

ALMER MATER NOTES

The Merry-makers' held a meeting on May 15th, and although the busy season is in full swing, we had a fair attendance.

It was decided that we put on our play, "The Wild Oats Boy" in Kiefer's hall, June 10th.

This play will be followed by a dance. Coulman's orchestra will be in attendance. This play has met with success at two previous performances, but owing to spring work being the rule these days, we had to follow suit. Now we are getting busy with the Merry-makers' pursuits again.

Now, be sure and come and see this play—it's well worth your money. The admission will be in keeping with the times—Adults, 25c; students, 15c (this includes the dance). Any one coming to the dance only, the admission will be 25c each person, just the same. So you will be wise to see the play.

TELEGRAPHIC BRIEFS

On Tuesday, May 16, the University of Alberta concluded twenty-five years of work. According to a lengthy report on its activities during the quarter of a century, it is pointed out that the institution has ever been in the forefront to assist in many important movements that have been and are of benefit to all classes of people in the province. The university has well justified its existence and cost.

D. W. Warner, former U.F.A. member for Strathcona in the Dominion parliament, died at his home in Clover Bar last Thursday, at the age of 76. He had been a resident of the Edmonton district for 34 years.

The Edmonton Grads took the Chicago "Red Devils" into camp in the first game of a three game series on Saturday evening by the score of 75 to 34. On Monday evening last the visitors turned on some unlooked for speed and tricky plays, giving the Grads quite a lot more to worry about than in the first game. The final score was 48 to 60 in favor of the unbeatable Grads. There is no argument—there is no team in the world up to the present who can lick the Grads.

President Roosevelt has asked 54 countries to join in a movement to further reduce armaments and cease thoughts of aggression against each other.

Kenneth and Walter McLean are being brought from Tennessee to face a murder charge in connection with the death of Walter J. Parrille of Mannville district, last fall. Vegreville is trying to have the case heard in that town, having the nearest court house to the scene of the alleged murder.

A Genuine Sale of Quality Products At McFarland's

It is not often that residents of prairie provinces are able to enjoy such low prices of the necessities of life which are offered this week by Malkin's Products, Vancouver, through the energetic efforts of McFarland's, of Irma. Their large advertisement this week discloses a sale of first class quality products. The prices are naturally cut to the bone as an introductory offer. While offering these, this enterprising store have thrown in some genuine bargains in drygoods, etc. which no housewife can afford to miss. Procrastination is the thief of time. Turn to their large advertisement, then decide what you need and order EARLY as the supply, while ample for ordinary needs, is by no means adequate should a real general demand take place throughout the entire district. Extra copies of The Times have been ordered by the progressive store. So, once again, BE EARLY!

Ten Causes of Accidents

After long and careful study of statistics it has collected over a number of years, the motor vehicles branch of the Ontario department of highways, has listed the ten most frequent causes of motor accidents. They are as follows:

1. Following other vehicles too closely.
2. Making wide turns.
3. Attention to other things than driving.
4. Failure to get into proper traffic lane before turning.
5. Failure to give signals or use the rearview mirror.
6. Passing parked cars in hazard.
7. Cutting in too closely.
8. Too much confidence.
9. Discourtesy.
10. Failure to observe traffic signs.

It will be noted at once that "speeding" is not included in the list. Most times it is the cause of an accident, but not frequently enough to be itself in the first ten. Experience has shown that speed alone rarely is responsible for danger on the highways provided the driver has a clear road—and a clear head. As soon, however, as the speeder starts paying attention to other things than his driving, he is in for trouble but the cause of the accident then is listed as number three.

The list would tend to prove that thoughtlessness in traffic is the underlying cause of most road accidents. The careful driver is one who keeps his wits about him and pays attention to the job in hand—which is the operation of a powerful machine moving among other similarly powerful machines.

With another motoring season just getting nicely under way, motorists would do well to study and ponder "the fatal ten."

COURAGE

Abraham Lincoln told the story of a young recruit on his first march to battle in the great civil war who, feeling his knees shaking violently, looked down upon them and said: "Shake away, old knees, I am going to take you to lots worse places than this."

A great statesman, one of England's most powerful, effective and convincing orators, on being asked if he approached a debate with a sense of complete assurance, replied: "That day when my knees do not tremble as I rise to speak, that day I cease to speak."

Here lies the very essence of courage. A reverent fact that one may fall short of one's best effort is the most effective stimulus to greater zeal and achievement.

We may have to move with caution and even timidity in such days as these, but the rewards of real, intelligent courage are as sure as the rising of the sun.

Our Balanced Budget

Ah! It has been discovered. The utopia of civic administrations. Bankers who have been struggling with the tangled affairs of villages, towns, and cities, who have gone off the gold standard, would probably lift their hats in reverence in the presence of such officials as the village of Irma, Alberta, has gathered together. This village closed the year 1932 with a bank balance of $2,100, which was $600 greater than a year ago and less arrears of taxes were reported. Aside from our debt due next August for $318, it has no debt and has never borrowed from the bank, always following the practice of financing public works with cash.

The above was a clipping from the Burroughs Adding Machine Co's Monthly Journal sent to Mr. R. L. Penfield, Manager of the Irma Branch Bank of Montreal by the Alta. District Superintendent of the Bank of Montreal, Calgary.

See "Mixed Pickles," at Rodino Hall, May 26

At Rodino hall, May 26th, 1933, you can get rid of the "blues" by seeing "Mixed Pickles." It's one long, laugh. See the Nigger Parliament: a sure cure for the depression. Oh, boy!—and a grand dance afterward. Admission, adults, 25c; children, under 15, 10c. The fun commences at 8.30 p.m.

Heard at the poker party: "I know a man who has been married 30 years and he spends every evening of his life right at home." "That's what I call love." The doctor calls it paralysis.
